

COPROLITES

This is fossilized poo. It is a trace fossil. It can help us discover what an extinct animal ate long ago.

This fossil might be from a turtle. Scientists have studied fossil feces from snails to dinosaurs and even ancient cats and giant sloths.

Fossil feces also tell us that an animal was in an area, even though fossils of the animal itself may not be found.