

ARCHIMEDES BRYOZOANS

Bryozoans are small animals that live in water. They have existed for a long time. Today they live mostly in the world's oceans where the water is clear.

They are some of the most common marine fossils. Like coral, individual animals living together in colonies made this fossil. Each individual animal lived in a hollow portion of the skeleton. The animal caught its food with tentacles that extended from holes in the skeleton.